About the Summit

In an era often characterized by materialism & fast-paced living, the essence of spirituality offers a profound antidote. Spirituality provides a moral compass, guiding individuals towards ethical behaviour and responsible stewardship of the planet. This reverence for life translates into practices that promote sustainability, environmental conservation and social justice.

In the pursuit of a clean and healthy society, spirituality intersects with various domains, including mental, physical and environmental health. Research has shown that spiritual practices such as meditation, prayer and mindfulness are associated with numerous health benefits, including stress reduction, improved immune function, and enhanced psychological well-being. By integrating these practices into daily life, individuals can cultivate resilience and vitality, contributing to a healthier society.

The Brahma Kumaris organization plays a vital role in building a clean and healthy society by promoting spiritual values, offering Rajyoga Meditation practices for inner peace and well-being, advocating for environmental sustainability and working towards social justice and equality.

The Global Summit on "Spirituality for a Clean and Healthy Society" would aim to bring together scholars, practitioners, policymakers, and community leaders to explore the role of spirituality in promoting individual and collective well-being, with a specific focus on fostering environmental sustainability and public health.
